DEAR PARENTS:

The honor roll looks fine in the graded school but very poor in numbers from the High School. Are you requiring your boys and girls to do several hours of systematic study outside of school hours? Do you require them to have a definite period for study each night at home? The high school program is so arranged that students of this department must have several hours of study outside of school hours or they cannot do the work and will fail and be compelled to take the same grade over next year. We cannot control your children outside of school hours. You must see that they do systematic study at home. Their grade book at the end of each month will show you whether they are making a passing grade on each study or not. You should examine their reports each month carefully and in this way you can tell whether they are doing good or bad work in school. The report card is the official statement from your school, and all pupils will be promoted according to the grade it contains. Do not wait, see about it at the end of each month and you will then know whether your boy or girl will be promoted or retained at the end of the year. Do not lay the blame on the school when you are not doing your part. See that they do their school work thoroughly at home. Some of our parents allow their children to run the streets at night or go visiting. This is wrong because an education requires work and hard study and only in this way can your children be anything like thorough. You will find the teachers and myself doing all we possibly can for your children while at school but you must make arrangements about their home study and see to it that they do definite and systematic work there or the results will be very unsatisfactory to all concerned.

Yours for service,

C. F. MARTIN, Supt.

The case arose over the attempt of Mr. Garrett to close a road claiming the land as private property. The case attracted much attention. The road leads to Mr. Shroat's farm on Slate creek.
